ABSTRACT

The Southwest Regional Laboratory (SWRL) Mod 2 Reading Program is planned as a four-year program (K-3) for teaching reading skills to primary-grade children. To date, all stories have been written for the first-year and second-year segments of the program. This paper describes the selection of rules and words, the number and type of stories, and the word-usage and story-length specifications for the reading stories in the third- and fourth-year programs. ABSTRACT

The SWRL Mod 2 Reading Program is planned as a four-year program (Grades K-3) for teaching reading skills to primary-grade children. To date, all stories have been written for the first-year and second-year segments of the program. This paper describes the selection of rules and words, the number and type of stories, and the word-usage and story-length specifications for the reading stories in the Third-year and Fourth-year Programs.

STORY SPECIFICATIONS FOR MOD 2 THIRD-YEAR AND FOURTH-YEAR READING

Howard J. Sullivan

The SWRL Mod 2 Reading Program is planned as a four-year program (Grades K-3) for teaching reading skills to primary-grade children. Derivation of the word and rule populations for the entire program has been described in previous Laboratory documents (Berdiansky, Cronnell and Koehler, 1969; Berdiansky and Stanton, 1969; Desberg and Cronnell, 1969). Berdiansky, Cronnell and Stanton have also specified recommended rule and word populations for each year in the four-year program.

The stories for the Mod 2 Reading Program are currently being written by Product Development staff members. To date, all stories have been written for the first-year and second-year segments of the program. Specifications for these stories are contained in DM 13 (Sullivan, et al., 1969) and in a Laboratory memorandum re Mod 2 SYAP stories (Sullivan, February 4, 1970). The purpose of this paper is to describe the final selection of rules and words and document the specifications for the third-year and fourth-year stories.

Selection of Rules and Words

The majority of the productive sound-symbol correspondence rules derived from the original Mod 2 lexicon were included in the first-year and second-year segments of the program. The First-year Program contains 30 such rules and the Second-year Program includes 48 rules. For inclusion in the Third-year and Fourth-year Programs, 23 additional rules were selected from the sequenced word lists for the Third-year and Fourth-year Programs (Cronnell, Berdiansky and Stanton, 1969; Cronnell, 1970).

The 101 rules selected for the Mod 2 Program provide a base that will enable the child who can successfully decode new words to read several thousand words. (Although many of the words in the initial Mod 2 lexicon were subsequently deleted because of their difficulty level with respect to vocabulary, the lexicon from which the rules were originally derived consisted of over 7400 words.) To facilitate early learning of the rules, the remaining 23 of the 101 rules included in the third-year and fourth-year word lists will be taught early in the Third-year Program.

Acquisition of all 101 rules by early in the third year of the program has the advantage of permitting children to decode at a relatively early time all rule-based words from the entire Mod 2 word population. Learning of the rules by this time also makes it possible for the Laboratory's story writers to use in subsequent third-year and fourth-year stories any desired words from among all rule-based words not previously used in Mod 2 stories.

The rules to be taught in the Third-year Program are contained in Appendix A, along with the words selected by the story writers to be taught as exemplars of each rule and to be included in the first story read by the children after teaching of the rule. Also included in Appendix A are nine sets of words to be taught as "sight" words, rather than rule-based words, in the Third-year Program. The decision not to teach the rules listed for these sets of words was based on the relatively low number of word exemplars of the rules and/or anticipated learning interference problems due to the similarity of these rules to rules taught previously.

In stories following the teaching of the rules in the Third-year Program, the story writers will be permitted to use as new words any previously unused rule-based words from the final Mod 2 lexicon. Previously unused words from this lexicon have been classified into two separate lists based upon their judged vocabulary difficulty. Words judged to be in the active or passive vocabulary of second-grade students are listed in Appendix B. Presented in Appendix C are words which were judged (1) not to be in the passive vocabulary of most primary-grade students and (2) to be useful enough for communication purposes that it would be of value to provide vocabulary instruction and practice (i.e., meanings and usage in stories).

Number and Types of Stories

There will be approximately 110 stories in the Third-year Program. The first 20 stories will be written to accompany the teaching of the sound-symbol correspondence rules and will use as new words the exemplars of these rules shown in Appendix A. Stories 21-29 will use as new words the nine sets of sight words in Appendix A. New words for the remaining third-year stories will be selected from among the rule-based words contained in Appendix B.

The Third-year Program will contain a broad range of story types. The program will include sports and adventure stories, mystery stories, fairy tales, science fiction, and humorous stories. Approximately 70-80 percent of the stories will deal with realistic or semi-realistic characters and situations, although the excitement and humor levels in these stories will typically be greater than is normal in real life. The characters and events in the remaining 20-30 percent of the stories will clearly be of a more fantastic nature.

The Fourth-year Program will contain both individual stories and short novels. Approximately 70 individual stories similar to the third-year stories will be included in the Fourth-year Program. The new words for these stories will also be selected from the words listed in Appendix B. The remaining reading material for the Fourth-year Program will consist of short novels ranging from 6-12 chapters in length. A chapter in a novel will be similar in length to an individual story in the Fourth-year Program. There will be about seven or eight novels in the program, and these novels will contain a total of approximately 70 chapters. Thus, there will be a combined total of about 140 chapters and stories in the Fourth-year Program.

All new words used in the novels will be vocabulary words selected from the word list in Appendix C.

Word Usage and Story Length

Specifications for usage of new words and for total number of words in a story are listed below.

Type of Stories	New Words per Story	Minimum Usage in First Story	Source of New Words	Words per Story or Chapter
Third-year	5	3	Appendix A & Appendix B	550-800
Fourth-year Individual	5	2	Appendix B	600-900
[1]Fourth-year Novels	5	1	Appendix C (Vocabulary)	600-900

All third-year and fourth-year stories will range from four to seven pages in length and contain from one to three pages with no illustrations.

A maximum of three new proper names may be used in any story. New names should not be included in figuring the five new words per story. A record of new proper names by story should be kept by the writers along with the record of new words per story. In selecting names, preference should be given to common and regularly spelled names. A total of no more than 50 new names should be included throughout the third-year and fourth-year stories. Names that may be used in the third-year and fourth-year stories are listed in Appendix D.

The new words in the fourth-year novels will be selected from among the vocabulary words in Appendix C. In the stories, it would be desirable to use the word in a context in which its meaning is relatively easy to understand and/or to include an illustration representing the new word on the first page on which it appears. Whenever feasible, one or both of these procedures should be used unless they interfere with the plot or continuity of the story.

All new words from the first-year and second-year stories, except those from the second-year Animal Stories, will serve as the beginning word base for the third-year stories. These words are listed in Appendix E. The new words from the Animal Stories are not included in the beginning word base because these stories will serve as supplementary reading in the Second-year Program, and some children therefore will not be introduced to these new words in the second year.

A record of new words used by story in the third-year and fourth-year stories will be maintained by the story writers and editor. The editor's responsibilities will also include (1) determining that specifications regarding types of stories, word usage and story length are followed and (2) maintaining for the third-year and fourth-year stories summary charts similar to the first-year and second-year charts.

[2]All words in this addendum were originally designated (in the initial word lists provided by Product Design) as irregular words and were not included in the list of regularly spelled words. However, the words in the addendum were subsequently re-classified as regular (not asterisked above) and irregular (asterisked above) for instructional purposes. Any of the regular words may be included with the words in Appendix B as new words in a story. The words listed as irregular (i.e., the asterisked words) in this addendum should be grouped together as new words in a story so that either all or none of the new words in a particular story are irregular.

[1]All words in this addendum were originally designated (in the initial word lists provided by Product Design) as irregular words and were not included in the list of regularly spelled vocabulary words. However, the words in the addendum were subsequently re-classified as regular (not asterisked above) and irregular (asterisked above) for instructional purposes. Any of the regular words may be included with the words in Appendix C as new words in a story. The words listed as irregular (i.e., the asterisked words) in this addendum should be grouped together as new words in a story so that either all or none of the new words in a particular story are irregular.
